Eurasian Mission Alexander Dugin 2014-12-15 According to Alexander Dugin, the twenty-first century will be defined by the conflict between Eurasians and Americans. The possible result is the dominance of Russia and China on Earth to be allowed to develop in its own way, free of interference, and in accordance with the laws of nature and social evolution.

For Dugin, the Eurasian and American ideologies are based on a different understanding of history and the nature of reality. Eurasians believe that the world is a place where things happen, while Americans believe that things happen because the world is defined by human thought. Eurasians also believe in a natural order, while Americans believe in a revolutionary one.

Dugin argues that the conflict between Eurasians and Americans will be a long and difficult one, but one that is necessary for the survival of the world. He believes that the Eurasian model of society is the only one that can save the planet from the destructive forces of the American model.

Dugin also argues that the Eurasian model is more sustainable than the American model. He believes that the American model is based on consumerism and materialism, while the Eurasian model is based on spirituality and nature. He also believes that the Eurasian model is more democratic than the American model, as it is based on the idea of a natural order and not on the idea of a chosen people.

Dugin's book is an important contribution to the growing debate about the future of the world. It offers a unique perspective on the conflict between Eurasians and Americans, and it provides a compelling argument for the importance of the Eurasian model.
