The Man In The Principals Office

The Man in the Principal's Office - Harry F. Wolcott 2003 Harry Wolcott's groundbreaking anthropological study into the life of an elementary school principal is now reprinted in a new edition. One of the first studies of its kind, Wolcott uses an ethnographic approach to analyze a single occupation within urban American society. Originally written in 1973, the text skillfully applies anthropological concepts and methodology to the realm of education. This new edition features an updated preface written by the author.

Teachers Versus Technocrats - Harry F. Wolcott 2003 In Teachers Versus Technocrats, author Harry Wolcott draws on his dual perspective as an educator and an anthropologist to provide a unique and penetrating look at the dynamics of a federally funded research and development project and to analyze what happened when university researchers and school district administrators attempted to introduce an experimental planning and evaluation system in an operating school district. Based on three years of research in which Wolcott uses a variety of anthropological field techniques, this study into the school's SPECS (School Planning, Evaluation, and Communication System) program reveals insight into the project's impact on teachers and administrators and analyzes the basic cultural patterns and relationships among educators. Originally published in 1977, this new edition includes an updated preface by the author and should be valuable to educators and anthropologists alike.

The Principals Causes of Man's Salvation - John Brinsley 2013-05-05 Brinsley's treatment of his principle text is one of the best Puritan treatments and biblical expositions of God's election of men in Christ. "All that the Father giveth me shall come unto me; and him that cometh unto me, I will in no wise cast out." (John 6:37). He covers three main propositions. 1. There are some among the sons of men given by God the Father to his Son Christ. 2. All those who are so given will come to him. 3. Those who so come he will in no wise cast out. This is a clear, concise and expository work that explains the nuances of election as well as the practical application of the doctrines which apply both to Christians in election, and those God passes by in reprobation. This is not a scan or facsimile, has been updated in modern English for easy reading and has an active table of contents for electronic versions.

Those Kids, Our Schools - Shyia Reese Griffin 2017-11-14 In Those Kids, Our Schools, Shyia Reese Griffin examines patterns of racial interaction in a large, integrated high school and makes a powerful case for the frank conversations that educators could and should be having about race in schools. Over three years, Griffin observed students, teachers, and administrators in a "post-racial" suburban high school in the Midwest. In its hallways, classrooms, lunchrooms, and staff meetings, she uncovered the disturbing ways in which racial tensions and prejudices persist and are reinforced. Students engaged in patterns of behavior that underscored racial hierarchies. Teachers—no matter how intellectually committed to equity and diversity—often lacked the skills, resources, or authority to address racial issues, while administrators failed to acknowledge racial tensions or recognize how school practices and policies perpetuated racial inequality. This astute and thoughtful book offers a revealing glimpse into the world of young people struggling with the legacy of racism. More important, it highlights the disservice being done to all students in our schools when educators fail to critically interrogate issues of race. Griffin’s perspective analysis illuminates the persistent influence of race in our education system and shows how—with appropriate support—teachers and students can develop the capacity to address racial issues and dynamics in schools in a frank and constructive way.

Ijeuwa - Onyekachi Peter Onuoha 2015-07-21 Ijeuwa portrays vividly and sensitively the political, economic, social and religious disillusionments of an English graduate, an archetypal unemployed 21st century Nigerian graduate. The novel captures the traumatic travels of thousands of Nigerian graduates swarming the streets aimlessly engendered by the prevalent unemployment and the political system. Ijeuwa is a novel of disillusionism. It chronicles the plight of the Nigerian graduates and populace trapped in the tides of unemployment and insecurity. It creates a vibrant portrait of their psychology. Ijeuwa is the travails of graduates and the unemployed in 21st century Nigeria. The novel portrays the spirit of struggle and the will to survive of the masses. The novel is a mirror of the society and a critique of Nigerian democracy. The novel portrays the Nigerian government as rotten to the teeth and grossly irresponsible as the masses suffer untold hardship and travails in a country immensely richly endowed with natural and artificial resources. The writer envisions the neglect of the masses by the government as the prologue to anarchy in the society and the epilogue to security in all its ramifications. The novel is a sublime creation of the writers artistic ingenuity with a compelling theme and plot. It is the writers mirror of his society and time. The novel is an impressive and ardent attempt to capture the realism of the writers time.

Principals of Inclusion - Darrin Griffiths 2013-05 Dr. Griffiths' Principals of Inclusion is both a practical, realistic blueprint and an inspiring call to action for accelerating schools/school systems in their search to optimize all students' potential (inclusion). In an information age and an increasingly interconnected Global Village, no student's potential can afford to be wasted, especially by exclusionary educational practices/traditions (either conscious or unconscious). Dr. Griffiths writes clearly, using universal metaphors/tactics applicable to all educational situations.

Resurrecting Lou Boudreau - Karl William Sikkena 2005 This study explored a largely unexamined subset of the secondary school principal population: those who carry a daily teaching assignment in addition to their administrative responsibilities. The project chronicled teaching principals' actions and identified key influences on their work. Six school leaders were selected for the study via snowball sampling that sought maximum variation in school governance and demographics. Qualitative data were gathered through observation, multiple interviews, and documentation, and then coded and analyzed using the method of constant comparison. The study resulted in the concept of the six leaders' work in the context of their respective schools. These portraits showed that teaching principals took on the same administrative tasks as their colleagues who do not run classrooms every day. The contextual factors shaping teaching principals' work were largely limited to school size and school culture. The six principals profiled here all ran small schools where their teaching was encouraged, even expected. Variations in demographics, governance, and policy did not seem to be pertinent to the principals' decisions to teach, nor to their ability to carry off the additional responsibilities of teaching. The study contributes to an understanding of the variable (the teaching principalship) long thought obsolete or unfeasible in the complexity of modern schools: first, by demonstrating that this role is viable in secondary schools; and second, by illustrating the functions of the role in school settings. Further study might develop a broader profile of the status of teaching principals in American schools, and seek additional lessons from other fields in which leaders are also practitioners.

The Reel Cowboy - Buck Rainey 1996 Movies and books have romanticized the life of the cowboy. To most, the heroes of countless Westerns fall into one of three categories: the strong, silent, asexual deliverer of damsels in distress; the slick and gaudy guitar-strummer; and the virile, violent drifter. In truth, real cowboys had little in common with the fictionalized characters of literature and the silver screen. The "real" cowboys of yesteryear are recalled in Part One of this work. The make-believe West of Gene Autry, Buck Jones, Harry Carey, and many others is contrasted with the real American West. Part Two discusses the many movies based on the writings of Western writers. The works of Zane Grey, Louis L'Amour, Max Brand, Luke Short, Ernest Haycox and many others have been transformed to the silver screen, often with great success. Next examined are the movies based upon three writers of the great Northwest: James Oliver Curwood, Jack London and Rex Beach. A concluding section looks at cinema cowboys on the so-called "sawdust trail." Will Rogers, Tom Mix, Jack Hoxie were among those real cowboys who performed in circuses and Wild West shows.
