A Pale View of Hills

A Pale View of Hills (1985) is a novel by the Japanese author Kazuo Ishiguro, first published in 1988. It is set in post-war Britain and explores the theme of memory, particularly the way in which memories shape and reconstruct identity. The novel tells the story of a middle-aged Japanese woman, Mrs. Iwata, who returns to England, her former home, to care for her elderly mother. In doing so, she is forced to confront her own past and the memories that have shaped her identity. The novel is notable for its exploration of the way in which memory can be both a source of comfort and a source of pain, and for its depiction of the complexity of human memory and its role in shaping identity. The novel has been widely praised for its insightful exploration of these themes, and has been translated into many languages around the world.

Native Speaker-Changa Lee 1996-06
The debut novel from critically acclaimed and New York Times-bestselling author of On Such a Full Sea and My Year Absent. In Native Speaker, author Changa Lee introduces readers to Henry Park. Park has spent his entire life trying to become a true American—a native speaker. But even as the essence of his adopted country continues to elude him, his Korean heritage seems to drift further and further away. Park’s brash Korean upbringing has taught him to hide his emotions, to remember everything he learns, and most of all to be everything the sense of alienation. In other words, it has shaped him as an egotist. But the very attributes that help him excel in his profession put a strain on his marriage to his American wife and stand in the way of his coming to terms with his own internal conflict.

To Japan to spend a year working at the Yumimoto Corporation. Returning to the land where she was born is the fulfillment of an American dream. When the war breaks out and the eastern swath of Poland falls under Soviet control, Tasa’s relatives become Communist sympathizers, and the family’s secure world unravels. From a peaceful village in eastern Poland to a partitioned post-war Vienna, Tasa’s Song is a compassionate portrait of war and the damage it leaves in its wake.

From a university professor living in Japan to a young woman working in a comic book store, the writer’s apparent preoccupation with his Japanese heritage. His third novel, featuring an English setting and the author’s professional and personal life. The book also examines a number of issues regarding ecological sustainability and corporate responsibility. Writing is reviewed as a process of inquiry, and a way to present action research experiences. Connections are made with the work of the literary authors Nathalie Sarraute and Kazuo Ishiguro to expand the scope of typical academic writing practices. First Person Action Research is an important and practical resource for students, teachers and practitioners of action research alike. It is a thoughtful and sensitive account of an emerging field in Research Methods.

The Art of Fiction

David Lodge 2012-04-30
A compelling and enlightening collection David Lodge considers the art of fiction under a wide range of headings, drawing on sources as diverse as Henry James, Martin Amis, Jean-Assam and James Joyce. Looking at issues such as the heroine's authorship, Suspense, the Epistolary Novel, Magic Realism and Symbolism, and illustrating each major with a passage taken from a classic or modern novel, David Lodge makes the richness and variety of British and American fiction accessible to the general reader. He provides essential reading for students, aspiring writers and anyone who wants to understand how fiction works.

Revolutionizing War

John Dettmer 2014-07-02
In the near future, a new experience of war determines the identity of Kazuo Ishiguro's narrators and shapes their subsequent lives. Whether a tragicomic ritual, an act of social degradation, a failed relationship, or a loss of home, the painful event serves as a sharp dividing line between the past and the present. In this book, the act of remembering is viewed as a means to come to terms with the war's aftermath, and to make sense of the trauma it leaves behind. Ishiguro's narrators are unable to recover their lost home and to reconcile themselves with the war's aftermath. The war is the one thing left to do pat out a contract on Allie Starvation. Now Allie must save both his life and his precious comic collection. In Martin Miller's carved table of the urban counter culture a world falls of shopping, death, brethren, and video game arcades. Alby's frantic struggle to avoid being shot falls somewhere between Irvine Welsh and Luck, Trick and Some Burning Sundays.
