The Herder Symbol Dictionary 1988

Drawn to the Word: Amanda Dillon 2021-11-05 A unique study of lectionaries and graphic design as a site of biblical reception How artists portrayed the Bible in large canvas paintings is frequently the subject of scholarly exploration, yet the presentation of biblical texts in contemporary graphic designs has largely been ignored. In this book Amanda Dillon engages multimodal analysis, a method of semiotic discourse, to explore how visual composition, texture, color, directionality, framing, angle, representations, and inscription produce potential meanings for biblical graphic designs. Dillon focuses on the artworks of two American graphic designers—the woodcuts designed by Menrad Craighead for the Roman Catholic Sunday Missal and Nicholas Marckel’s illustrations for the worship books of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America—to present the merits of multimodal analysis for biblical reception history.

An Introduction to Iconography

Roofof van Straten 2012-10-02 Available for the first time in English, An Introduction to Iconography explains the ways that artists use references and allusions to create meaning. This book presents the historical, theoretical, and practical aspects of iconography and ICONCLASS, the comprehensive iconographical indexing system developed by Henri van de Waal. It gives particular emphasis to the history of iconography, personification, allegory, and symbols, and the literary sources that inform iconographic readings, and includes annotated bibliographies of books and journal articles from around the world that are associated with iconographic research. The author of numerous articles and a four-volume reference work on Italian prints, Roofof van Straten is currently working on an updating of the prints of Goltzius and his school.

The Female Ancestors of Christ

Ann Belford Ulanov The spiritual power of the Feminine shines forth in this psychological study of four Old Testament heroines from Jesus’ family tree. Tamar, Rahab, Ruth, and Bathsheba are the only women mentioned by name in the Gospels’ genealogies and, for Ann Belford Ulanov, this indicates that they impart something essential to the lineage of Christ. By exploring their brave and unconventional lives, she demonstrates how salvation enters the world in the feminine mode of being human, through these women’s embodiment of such powerful and deeply feminine qualities as ingenuity, audacity, determining, compassion, seduction, and devotion. “Like bolts of lightning, the stories of these outcast virgins illuminate what spiritual wholeness can be in the lives of contemporary women and men. Ann Ulanov’s riveting insights into their daring acts reveal their deep significance in the genealogy of Jesus and expand our understanding of the words courage and love.” — Marion Woodman, author of Addiction to Perfection and Leaving my Father’s House

Writing through Music—Jann Pasler 2007-12-12 Drawing on a passion for music, a remarkably diverse interdisciplinary toolbox, and a gift for accessible language that speaks equally to scholars and the general public, Jann Pasler invites us to read and write “through” music, unveiling the forces that affect our sonic encounters. In an extensive collection of historical and critical essays, some appearing for the first time in English, Pasler describes the social, moral, and political preoccupations lurking behind aesthetic taste. Arguing that learning from musical experience is vital to our understanding of past, present, and future, Pasler’s work trenchantly reasserts the role of music as a crucial contributor to important public debates about who we can be as individuals, communities, and nations. The book’s wide-ranging and perspectivistic approaches to musical biography and history challenge us to rethink our assumptions about important cultural and philosophical issues including national identity and postmodern musical hybridity, material culture, the economics of power, and the relationship between classical and popular music. Her work uncovers the lost self-fashioning of modernists such as Vincent d’Indy, Augusta Holmes, Jean Cocteau, and John Cage, and addresses categories such as race, gender, and class in the early 20th century in ways that resonate with experiences today. Such essays explore the influence and innovative musical approaches, such as her notion of “question spaces,” open up the complex cultural and political networks in which music participates. This provides us with the reasons and tools to engage with music in fresh and exciting ways. In these thoughtful essays—music—whether beautiful or cacophonous, reassuring or seemingly incomprehensible—comes alive as a bearer of ideas and practices that offers deep insights into how we negotiate the world. Jann Pasler’s Writing through Music brilliantly demonstrates how music can be a critical lens to focus the contemporary critical, cultural, historical, and social issues of our time.

Images of the Dead in Grief—Susan Olson 2020-07-13 While in training at the C.G. Jung Institute in Zürich in 1988, Susan Olson suffered the loss of her daughter in an auto accident. In this intimate and unique exploration, Olson uses C. G. Jung’s psychological framework to describe her journey through tragedy, guided by a series of vivid dreams. In Images of the Dead in Grief: A Jungian View of Mourning, Jung’s definition of the dream as a “harbinger of fate, a portent and comforter, a messenger of the gods” evolves from theory into embodied insight as Olson describes her encounter with transformative power of grief. Drawing from personal experience as well as theoretical and clinical material, Olson presents premonitory dreams, which occur before the loss of a loved one, and grief dreams, which follow a loved one’s death, and analyzes both according to Jung’s method of dream interpretation. Sharing her own dreams as well as those of other mourners, Olson asserts that such dreams play a crucial role in the dreamer’s emotional recovery and psychological development, otherwise known as the process of individuation. She sensitively offers an assessment of the stages of grief and draws on the Greek myth of Demeter and Persephone, Jung’s memoirs, and other literature to amplify her experience of mourning. In this rare combination of grief theory and dream work, Images of the Dead in Grief is both a grief memoir and an extensive study of C. G. Jung’s view of the mourning process. This fully updated revision will be of immense interest to Jungian analysts and trainees, academics, psychologists, students of Jungian dream analysis, and all who have suffered loss.

Works of Love—Robert L. Perkins 1999 “To claim that Works of Love is an important philosophical essay is to assume hazardous burden of proof. The book’s title is an allusion to the Bible’s injunction that we should love our neighbor as we love ourselves, a far cry, far instance, from Diotoma’s ladder of erotic desire up which we climb from the love of bodies until we catch a vision of that ‘single sea of beauty’ which is God.” (p. 9). This book, which is both philosophically and psychologically useful, is particularly likely or one may even be a determined enemy, suspects immediately to some a book that with such an obviously religious title must be especially morally and, at best, full of sermon helps for the harried clergy or, at worst, laden with rules for the unlearned laity. A casual perversal of a few paragraphs, however, shows these “put-down” views of the book to be unfounded.

A String and a Prayer—Eleanor Wiley 2002-01-01 A String and a Prayer reveals the history and symbolism of prayer beads, teaches basic techniques for stringing beads and a host of other objects into prayer beads, and offers a variety of prayers and rituals to use those beads on a daily basis. Beads have appeared throughout history. Prayer beads are used in the spiritual practices of cultures as diverse as the African Masai, Native Americans, Greek and Russian Orthodox, as well as the religious rituals of Islam, Hinduism, Christianity, and Buddhism. But prayer is highly personal. By infusing personal significance into prayer beads, one can create a personal ritual of healing, inspiration, and meaning. This book contains detailed instructions on the fashioning of modernists such as Vincent d’Indy, Augusta Holmès, Jean Cocteau, and John Cage, and addresses categories such as race, gender, and class in the early 20th century in ways that Cinderella and Her Sisters—Ann Belford Ulanov 1998 Seated in her nest of ashes, Cinderella embodies human misery. The essence of inner and outer nobility, she is the envy of her cruel stepmother and her ugly sisters. Using this familiar story, the authors explore the psychological and theological aspects of envy and goodness. They move back and forth between internal and external issues—from images of the dead and her ugly sisters. Using this familiar story, the authors explore the psychological and theological aspects of envy and goodness. They move back and forth between internal and external issues—from childhood and modern myth to the Bible and the individual. From the story of her own life to the mythic world of the Greek/mother/and the Arabian, the authors find in Cinderella a new understanding of the psychology of envy, the possibilities of goodness, the nature of suffering, and the nature of transformation.

The Book of Consciousness—Dr. Bara H. Loveland 2011-01-19 The Book of Consciousness by Dr. Bara H. Loveland Have you ever wondered what Consciousness is, or the mind, the unconscious or Archetypes and Symbols - how they work and how to define them? Without arriving at the reach of Consciousness, there are numerous books on “consciousness,” there are conferences held, and groups forming for “consciousness,” with dictionaries attempting to define it. Why have they not found the ultimate definition of Consciousness, to this day of the publication of The Book of Consciousness, in January 2017? Could Bara’s new book, The Book of Consciousness, hold the answer? Can it deliver the ultimate in Consciousness? There are many other questions, which science has not positively answered yet. Why is it that our “brain” (cerebrum), seat of the mind, has to be calmed from 40+ Hertz to 8 Hertz or less (literally put to sleep), in order to reach highest states of awareness, although the cerebrum is supposed to be the seat of the world’s highest intelligence? The Media and International Communication - Barbara Lewandowska-Tomaszczyk 2007 The twenty-first century is witness to complex social, political, and cultural phenomena transforming the world in which we live. There are numerous aspects to this global process; most of them, however, are related one way or another to the media of communication which foster and accelerate it. The chapters in this book approach media and international/intercultural communication from various global perspectives. The authors provide insight into the impact of media on different contexts, cultures and nations. One theme that weaves its way throughout this collection of essays is an intercultural one, broadly defined as the contact point between two cultures that changes both to some degree. Scholars from different places in the world try to understand, explain and/or argue from a variety of traditions, perspectives and values. They examine the contact point between culture and identity, media and culture, art and media, technology and translation, theater and culture, etc., in order to better understand how and to what degree changes occur.

Henry Clay Frick - Martha Frick Symington Sanger 1998 For the first time, a great-granddaughter of Henry Clay Frick, world famous art collector and steel tycoon, has assembled an intimate, pictorial biography that reveals the triumphs and tragedies of Frick's life. 370 illustrations, 225 in color.

Evil Children in Religion, Literature, and Art - E. Ziolkowski 2001-05-21 Evil Children in Religion, Literature and Art explores the genesis, development, and religious significance of a literary and iconographic motif, involving a gang of urchins, usually male, who mock or assault a holy or eccentric person, typically an adult. Originating in the biblical tale of Elisha's mockery (2 Kings 2.23-24), this motif recurs in literature, hagiography, and art, from antiquity up to our own time, strikingly defying the conventional Judeo-Christian and Romantic image of the child as a symbol of innocence.

Leonardo's Ink Bottle - Roberta Weir 1998 The artist's search for unique, meaningful expression, on paper or canvas, in clay or marble, wood or bronze, is actually mirrored in each of us. In this book, artist Roberta Weir demonstrates how to cast aside the mechanics of artistic expression and just do it.

Saint Judas, Apostle and Martyr - Kathryn Eberle Wildgen 2000 Between 1125 and 1135, it is generally agreed, a sculptor of genius usually referred to as Gislebertus carved a tympanum and a series of capitals for the cathedral dedicated to Saint Lazarus at Autun. The capital depicting the suicide of Judas is unique in the Romanesque repertoire both for its beauty of technique and for its execution of subject matter. The iconography is at once baffling and rich in possibilities of interpretation, which extend far beyond a simple image of a hanged man. One of the possibilities explored is that this is an image of a man realizing in extremis that he could and should have been remembered throughout history as Saint Judas, Apostle and Martyr, rather than as the paradigmatic traitor. There are objects in the image that demand - and receive - explanations, albeit tentative: the protuberance on Judas’ back; the «strap» from which he is hanging; the position of his hands and feet. The interpretation is set firmly in its historical period, but the image is also discussed as an object whose significance transcends the time and the place in which it was conceived and produced.

The Marriage of Heaven and Earth - Randall A. Clack 2000 From the Middle Ages to the close of the 17th century, alchemy was fundamental to Western culture. Though its significance declined with the rise of chemistry, the lore of alchemy still colors imaginative works in the modern world. This study examines the literary representation of alchemical theory and the metaphor of alchemical regeneration in the works of Edward Taylor, Edgar Allan Poe, Nathaniel Hawthorne, and Margaret Fuller. While Taylor used alchemical metaphors to illustrate the redeeming power of God’s grace, Poe used them to represent the transforming power of imagination. Hawthorne, in turn, used alchemical imagery to show the restorative power of love, while Fuller employed alchemical figures to suggest the reconciliation of gender opposites.
